Description of the story/idea

the story

31. October, Halloween night. Kids all over the world dress up and went around to get candies.

Two pumpkins were walking around, their names were Frank and Charlz, they were different pupmkins in their appearance and personalities. Charlz was very intelligent and positive. Frank was sad, depressed and egoistic.

Every Halloween they went out so they could do their favourite things... Charlz helped kids to be more friendly, share candies, but Frank taught them to throw eggs to people's houses.

Without each other knowing about their existences- they suddenly was by the same house. When they met each other- a lot of disagreements were jumping side to side. When kids interrupted this argument and gave a candy to Frank- unbelievable things started to happen. Frank got colourful, appreciated and happy, because he had never felt love.

Since then Charlz and Frank were best friends and enjoyed every Halloween together...

genre/mood

It feels little bit like a fairytail, what is for grown-ups and kids. People should get this story like a morality to be kinder daily to others next to us.

message

It is bad to be egoistic.
You are going to be happier if you will share happiness to others.
Being evil you are not going to feel better, so just start with changing yourself not others.

Analyzed with narrative curve

prelude

It is Halloween evening. Kids are walking around to get the candies. Pumpkin Charlz and Frank are getting ready for this evening too...

action

When evil pumpkin Frank appears and pushes kids to throw the eggs on the house and he lies that there is no one in there.

rising action

Lights in the house lights up and the kids are shocked that Frank lied to them. Frank tries to convince kids to do something bad again and throw candy papers on the ground. Finally they are going to the third house.

climax

fade out

Charlz and Frank becomes best friends and they spend every Halloween together being positive and friendly to other

Style tile

colours

I took the classic pumpkin colours but made them more saturated and interesting to make the characters more unique in their appearance.

Tones are saturated because they were inspired from Professor Balthazar's animated series.

inspiration

Professor Balthazar

contour line

I have contour lines around characters. They are in orange or black colour.

typography

I use Coquette, because it feels very playful, like a fairytail.

specific characteristics in the style

Character style is simple but at the same time they have details. Pumpkins have orange stripes, eyebrows (it depends on character emotions). The evil character has little bit darker colours and he is small, rounded, but the good one has lighter tones and he is tall, squared. Everyone has their own form to represent their personalities.

contrast between background and characters

The background colours are going to be little bit darker, the characters are going to "pop out" out of the set up because of their saturated orange colours. Background will have saturated accents-trees, houses. And characters are going to have a contour lines-background items will not have any contours.

Charlz goes like a wave because he loves dancing. It presents the positivity he always has...

This is like a part of myself because I have danced this move in hip-hop many times.
